

Will the G8 Summit listen to me?

The Times. Chris Harris 2004

Probably not?

As long as street children are excluded, Africa's young majority has no voice.

Street children survive on the edge of society. Nobody knows how many street children there are but we do know that wherever there is urban poverty street children exist.

It is in the voices of youth that solutions for the future can be found. If street children are ignored, a whole generation will miss its chance to be great.

We are giving street children a voice.
